RESIGN!

Arrigo explodes rumours of junior minister offer

NATIONALIST MP Robert Arrigo has dismissed as pure speculation the rumour that Prime Minister Lawrence Gonzi offered him a parliamentary secretariat, which he turned down insisting on a ministry instead.

"I couldn't refuse anything, because there was nothing to refuse," he said in an interview with MaltaToday Midweek (see page 11). "I wasn't offered anything.

I didn't ask for anything, either."

The PN backbencher admitted to a certain disappointment at being left out of Gonzi's revamped Cabinet, but denied feeling entitled to the tourism ministry.

"One might have expected a call, all things considered," he said. "But obviously one also has to also respect the Prime Minister's prerogative..."
