Heritage Malta monstrosity dwarfs Hagar Qim temple

HAGAR Qim, the world heritage site, is being dwarfed by the government's 'visitors' centre' which should have been built in the Maghlaq quarry in the vicinity of Mnajdra, and not in the car park next to the Hagar Qim temples, MEPA's own heritage watchdog emphatically stated before the permit was amended in April.

But now anyone visiting the temples can be expected to be taken aback by the scale of the new building that will host the visitor centre.

And all this could have been avoided had the centre been located in a nearby quarry. Full story page 7 Saviour Balzan page 15
