Failed bidders not giving up without a fight

HUTNEY-BATEMEN, the Israeli company that unsuccessfully tendered for the €200 million contract for the Delimara power station, on Monday filed a judicial protest to overturn the decision to choose Scandinavian firm BWSC – just days after the government defended its choice by arguing that the unsuccessful bidders 'had not appealed' against the Director of Contracts' verdict.

Legal experts have told MaltaToday that the judicial protest may be rejected on purely technical grounds, as the time-limit for submitting an appeal according to the tendering procedures had elapsed before the judicial protest was filed.

However, it remains debatable whether an appeal could even have been filed within the stipulated deadline, as Hutney-Batemen were not informed in writing of the outcome of their bid by the Director of Contracts, as stipulated by Clause 1.19 in the Contracts Department's own instructions to bidders.
