

Owen Bonnici - will not push law

Muscat gets cold feet over censorship abolition

KARL STAGNO-NAVARRA

LABOUR MP Owen Bonnici (pictured) has penned a private member's Bill to abolish the censorship board, which has however not been warmly received by Labour leader Joseph Muscat, this newspaper is informed.

Bonnici's abolition bill was briefly mentioned in a recent meeting of the Labour party's executive committee. But sources say the young MP's proposal to push for the abolition of the controversial censorship board was not supported eagerly by Joseph Muscat.

Contacted by this newspaper, Bonnici denied having ever spoken to Muscat about his draft bill.

But MaltaToday is informed that the young MP, who is the party's spokesperson for youth and culture, has privately communicated to others that the Opposition leader was having cold feet on his personal initiative.
